Dear M. Cherkaoui:

How extraordinarily thoughtful it was of you to keep me in mind and to send me the copy of your study of the relations between private interest groups and the State in Brazil during the first half of the 20th century. I look forward with keen interest to an early opportunity to read it carefully.

You are absolutely correct, I believe, in looking to this earlier period as the necessary background for understanding the later internationalization of the Brazilian economy. Too often scholars have ignored the critical role of the State, before the Vargas era, but thanks to you and to other researchers like Steve Topik this is now being corrected.

I wish that I had realized that you were still in Paris as I spent a month in that city this past summer. Saw Mauro but was otherwise buried in some research at UNESCO. I expect to return in the summer of 1988.

With best regards,
